Hopular Tales.

A LAUGHABLE EXPERIENCE.

Among the most familiar chronicles of the war, none exceeds in interest the "Diarry of a Southern Refuge during the war," (Hale & Son, New York, 1867.) It is understood to be from the pen of a gifted lady of Virginia, wife of an Episeopsi clergyman, and member of a family connection widely knewn aid escemed.

The humorous extract below strikes us as not unworthy of Dickens:

We left Winchester in the stage coach for Strasburg at 10 o'clock at night, on the 24th of December, 1861. The weather was bitter cold, and we congratulated ourselves that the coach was not crowded.

Mr. McG. and the girls were on the back seat, a Methodist Minister, a soldier and myself on the middle, and two soldiers and our Maid betsy on the front. We went off by starlight, with every prospect of a pleasant drive of eighteen miles.

As we were leaving the suburbs of the town, the driver drew up before a small house from which issued two women with a baby, two baskets, several bundles and a box. The passengers began to shout out, "Go on, driver; what do you mean? there's no room for another; go on." The driver made no reply, and the two women came to the coach door and began to put in their bundles. The gentlemen protested that they could not get in—there was no room. The woman with the baby said she would get in; she was "rigwine to Strasburg to spend Christmas with her reliations, whar she was born and raised, and whar she had not been for ten years, and nobody had a better right to the stage than she had, and she was agwine, and Kitty Grim was agwine too—she's my sister-in-law; and so is haby, 'cause baby never seen her relations in Strasburg in her life.

So, Uncle Ben!" she exclaimed to the driver, "take my bag, basket and box by you, and me, Kitty and baby, and the bundles and the little basket will go in-bundles and the little basket will go inside."

All this was said amidst violent protestations from the men within: "You can't get in; driver go on." But, suiting the action to the word, she opened the door, calling, "Come Kitty," got on the step and thrust her heod in, saying: "If these gentlemen is gentlemen, and has got any politeness, they'll git out and set with Uncle Ben, and let ladies come inside." A pause ensued. At last a subdued tone from the soldier in the middle seat was heard to say: "Madam, if you will get off the step, I will get out."

"Very well, sir; and why didn't you do that at first?" "And now," said she, looking at a man in the front seat; "there's another seat by Uncle Ben; sposen you git out and let Kitty Grim have your seat; she's bound to go." The poor man quietly got out, without saying a word, but the very expression of his back, as he got out of the coach, was subdued. "Now, Kitty, get in, and bring the little basket and very expression of his back, as he got out of the coach, was subdued. "Now, Kitty, got in, and bring the little basket and them two bundles; they won't pester the lady too much." The door was closed, and then, the seene being over, the passengers shouted with laughter.

Our heroine remained perfectly passive until we got to the picket post, a mile from town. The driver stopped; a soldier came up for passports. She was thunderstruck. "Passes! passes for white folks! I never heard of such a thing. I ain't got no pass; nuther is Kitty Grim." I suggested to her to keep quiet, as the best policy. Just at that time a Tennessee soldier had to confess that he had forgotten to get a passport, "You can't go on," and the soldier got out.

Presently the women's turn came.

Presently the woman's turn came.

'Madam, your passport, if you please?'

"But, Madam," began the official.

"You needn't' but, madam" me, 'cause I ain't gwine to git out, and I'd like to see the man that would put me out. This is a free country, and I'se gwine to Strasburg this night, so you might as well take your lantern out of my face."

"But Madam, my orders," began the

"But, Madam, my orders," began the picket.

"Don't tell me nothing 'bout your orders; I don't care nothing 'bout your orders; and you needn't think, 'cause the Tennessee man got out that I'se agwine to git out—cause I ain't. Ain't I got three sons in the army, great sight larger than you is? and they fit at Manassas, and they ain't no cowards; nuther is their mother; and I nin't agwine to git out of this stage this night, but I'm agwine to Strasburg, where I was born and raised."

The poor man looked non plussed, but yet another effort; he began, "My dear madam."

The poor man looked non plussed, but yet another effort; he began, "My dear madam."

"I ain't none of your dear madam; I'se just a free white woman, and so is Kitty Grim; and we ain't no niggers to get passes, and I'se gwine 'long this pike to Strasburg. Now I'se done talking."

With this she settled herself on the seat and leant back with a most determined air, and the discomfitted man shut the door amid peals of laughter from within and without. In a few moments we were quiet again, and all began to settle themsolves for sleep, when the silence was broken by our heroine.

"Kitty, is you siek?"

"No," said Kitty.

"Well, it is a wonder. Gentleman, can't one of you take Kitty's seat and give her yourn? she gits monstrous sick when she is riding with her back to the horses."

Thore was a death-like silence, and my curiosity was aroused to know how she would manage that point. After a few moments she began again.

"Kitty, is you sick?"

"No," says Kitty, "not yit."

"Well, I do wish one of you gentlemen would give Kitty his seat. Still no reply. All was becoming quiet again, when she raised her voice:

"Kitty Grim, is you sick?"

"Yes," said Kitty, "just a little."

"It knowed it—I knowed she was sick; and when Kitty Grim gets sick she most in general flings up."

The effect was electric. "My dear madam," exclaimed both gentlemen at once, "take my seat; by all means take my seat."

The Methodist clergyman being nearest my seat."

The Methodist clergyman being nearest gave up his seat and took hers. The change was soon effected amidst the most uproarious laughter, all feeling that the fairly outgeneralled the third time.

Fleet street, in London, contains many old taverns and chop houses, which carry us back to the days of Johnson, Boswell, and Goldsmith; and among the noted places of that character is the Mitre, near Mitre Court, which still stands, and is still renowned for the excellency of its chops and beef-steaks. Here Johnson and his friends were accustomed to congregate and discuss important events, over their chops and ale. The old house has been entirely renovated by the recent proprietor, and is mostly patronized by lawyers of the Inns of Court, although Englishmen of the old school still delight to take their steaks, chops, and half-and-half, here and recount their experiences in old London of a by-gone age.

Ordinarily, when strangers visit this extensive metropolis of the British Empire, they imagine that the district ten or twelve miles long by eight or nine in breadth is really London; but old London proper, or the City, is the nucleus of the whole. It was formerly surrounded by walls with gateways, which are now all removed; Temple Bar, the last relic of the old enclosure, designed by Sir Christopher Wren, and erected in 1672, has lately been removed, as it was an obstruction to street trafic. As a terror to evil-doers, the heads of decapitated criminals were stuck up on the top of this arch, until about eighty or ninety year ago.

The noted printers, publishers, solicitors and attorneys, poets, actors, and prose writers, of the 16th, 17th, and 18th centuries, all resided within a stones throw of St. Pauls and the Bank of England. Now, the population of the city proper only amounts to about 100,000 thousand, while the entire metropolis contains more than thirty times that number (about 3,000,000,) and is constantly expanding in all directions. Between nine and ten thousand new houses were erected in the year 1864 alone. When we reflect that the Great Fire of London, in September, 1666, destreyed 13,200 houses, and laid waste 400 streets, the prodigious mumber of 400,000 buildings now standing there gives to us some idea of the number and extent of the streets of that city.

Broadway, in New York, is considered to be excessively crowded with carriages, drays and omnibuses, but on the narrow Strand and Cheapside, of London, more than 100 vehicles pass through these streets per hour, besides foot passengers, which renders crossing these thoroughfares externly dangerous; the authorities however, have caused to be built in the middle of the streets at certain intervals, lampposts, surrounded by three or four granite posts, surrounded by three or f ney; and within its walls the Bishop of London is generall consecrated. The clock

London is generall consecrated. The clock also excites universal attention.

The Bank of England, often more familiarly called "the Old Lady of Threadneedle street," is an object of world-wide interest. Its founder was a Scotchman, named Patterson, who left as a legacy that no Scotchman should ever be permitted to act as a director. The capital is £14,500,000. About 1000 clerks are employed here, at salaries varying from £250 to $6000. Most of the building is open to visitors, and includes with courts, an area of about eight aeres. The bullion office, treasury, the apartments where the notes are printed, and the weighing office, where the coin-balances of accurate construction are used, are all worthy of a careful observation.

It is a well known fact that the Bank

The conductors, or guides, who are called warders or beefcaters, wear a cos'ume of Henry the VIII's time, and show all the objects of interest, such as the Brick Tover, where Lady Jane Grey was confined; Beauchamp Tower, the scene of Anne Bolyn's imprisonment; and Bovyer Tower, where it is said the Duke of Clarance was drowned in the butt of Walmsey.

The beef-caters and English guides generally show their good keeping in their bloated and blood-red faces, which bear evidence of numerous potations of the national brown stout, port, and bitter beer. Even the late parrot-like beadles of Westminster Abby needed this staff of life to enable them to recount the deeds and adventures of the dead enclosed within its walls.

The entire building covers eight acres, and cost two millions sterling. Three towers surmount the structure; the principle one called Victoria Tower, is of beautiful proportions, being 75 feet square and 340 feet high: the Queen's state entrance is situated at the base; the Clock Tower is 320 feet in altitude, and has the largest clock in England; there are four dials on the four faces of the tower, each 22½ feet in diameter; the pendulum is 15 feet long and weighs 680 pounds. The House of Lords and the House of Commons can be seen on Saturdays, by an order from the Lord Chamberlain, at an office near at hand, which is easily procured. Admission to the sitting can only be obtained by an order from a member, or from the Secretary of Legation, who has the privilege of recommending a certain number of persons weekly. Generally Americans do not experience any difficulty in gaining admittance during the sessions, provided they set about it in a proper manner. Mr. Moran, our present Secretary of Legation, is a genial and competent representative of our country, and willingly gives to all the information desired.

Although the Parliament House of Parliament, burnt in 1834, which is made memorable by the "Guy Fawkes Gun-powder-Plot." Westminster Hall, the principal hall of the old Palace, still stands and is now part and parcel of the main structure; it was erected in the time of William Rufus, and measures 290 feet in length, 68 feet wide, and 110 high, and unsupported by pillars. It has been the scene of cononation banquets for several centuries, but George IV. was the last royal gourmand, on which occasion the King's Champion rode in armed cap-a-pie, and challenged the world on the King's behalf.

Correspondence of the Middletown Transcript.

Mr. Eddron:—I have frequently had fenquiries from stockholders and friends of the Kent Co. Railroad as to why said road was not under way, and from others the assertion has been made to me, that it could never have been built, while some again importune me with enquirie if there is no way that can be suggested that a R. So frequent have these interogations become, that I propose to briefly answer all persons who may feel a deep interest in the welfare of the counties of Cecil and Kent as well as the interest of such an important enterprise, and give them a few hints which I consider entirely practical, and ask the perious consideration of the matter as I shall endeavor ta present, probably for the last time, to them.

By these circumstances and differences access of $100,000.

By these circumstances and differences alone the work was stopped, and no further prospect of a road was apparent at that time than there was before the enterprise was thought of. The great fear now entertained by those most interested is, there will be no railroad at all. The out-spoken thoughts of the several sections hoping to have been benefitted are, what a great wrong has been committed and what a shameful sacrifice of their money has been made; that their interests have been will-fully outraged and their rights violently taken from them by an overbearing and powerful monopoly, viz: The Frenchtown & New Caste Railroad, who have by an arbitrary act, sacrificed the interests of a large section of fertile and populous country to maintain the brief authority of a defunct corporation by refusing to allow Middletown as a terminus of the Kent Co. R. R. and foreing the company to go to reverse the section.

Two-thirds of the nine miles from Townsend to Massey's will be of no benefit to the Delaware Rilroad for fifty years. Those of the Kent county sampany who once favored Townsend now come out and acknowledge the error of their former views and acts, when it is too late.

But such is the state of affairs and a state whice will ever be deeply regretted by Cecil and Kent counties, I desire to call your attention and lay before you how entirely easy it would be to construct a railroad upon what I deem the true principal.

Procident of the United States.

Gen. Grant, receiving from Senator Morton the certificate of his election, anamoned, substantially, that in accepting the office of President of the United States he assured them of his determination to carry out faithfully the obligations of that office, and referred particularly to the necessities for an honest and faithful discharge of the revenue laws. He would call around him men who would earnestly carry out the principles of economy, retrenchment, and honesty, which were desired by the people of the country. Should the officers of the different branches of the fovernment not satisfy him in the discharge of their official duty, he would not hasitate a moment about removing them, and would do so just as quickly with his own appointments as with those of his predecessor. Gen. Grant stated that he had not announced his Cabinet up to the time of the official declaration of the result of the election, but had intended at that period to make known the names of the gentlemen whose services he would be glad to have in this respect, even to the gentlemen themselves, until he sent them into the Senate for confirmation. The reason for this determination, General Grant said, was because of the fact that should he do so, a pressure would immediately commence from various par-President of the United States.

Gen. Grant, receiving from Senator Morton the certificate of his election, anfact that should he do so, a pressure would immediately commence from various parties, to endeavor to induce him to change his determination, not so much probably from the fact that the opposition should be made from personal motives, but on account of the interest which the gentlemen may have for their own friends. For these and other reasons, he had concluded to make no public announcement of his Cabinet until the time mentioned.

General Grant spoke without any ward with the inet until the time mentioned.

General Grant spoke without any reserve and with the greatest frankness and courtesy, and his remarks were received by his distinguished visitors with every mark of interest and approbation. Afterwards Mr. Prayn, of the committee, addressed the General very briefly, to the effect that while the party with which he was identified differed politically from the President elect, he desired to assure him that his administration, in carrying out the principles which he had mentioned, would have their hearty support and co-operation.

The speeches were delivered more in a nanner, and the occasion was one of quiet though most intense interest. The mem-bers of the staff of General Grant were brough most intense interest. The members of the staff of General Grant were present. About twenty gentlemen were present altogether, including the committee and staff officers.

The committee after leaving General Grant's Headquarters proceeded to the Capitol and waited upon Speaker Colfax in his reception room. They presented him with a certificate of his election as Vice-President, signed by the President of the Senate, and then severally congratulated him; to which friendly expressions he responded as follows:

Gentlemen—Please convey to the two Houses of Congress my acceptance of the office to which I have been elected by the people of the United States, and assure them that I shall endeavor to prove worthy of this mark of confidence by fidelity to principle and duty.

The committee then withdrew.

The Peach Prospect.—There seems to be a diversity of opinion among our experienced fruit growers rerative to the effect the recent warm spell has had upon our next summer's crop of peaches. Some contend that the buds are sufficiently swollen to be affected by the cold, should any be experienced, while others are equally tenacious to an adverse opinion. They all admit that the buds are swollen, but differ in regard to the degree. This we imagine, depends altogether upon the quality of the soil on which the trees stand. Those en light, sandy soils, are more advanced than those on heavy clay land, and we would not be the least surprised if some orchards are an entire failure again this year.—Sussex Journal. ARE NOW COMPLETED.

A S 500 miles of the western portion of the line, beginning at Sacramento, are also done.

267 Miles Remain

To be finished, to open the Grand Through Line to the Pacific. This Opening will certainly take place early Besides a donation from the Government of 12,000 acres of land per mile, the Company is entitled to a subsidy in U. S. Bonds on its line as completed and accepted, at the average rate of about $20,500 per mile, according to the difficulties encountered, for which the Government takes a second lien as security. Whether subsidies are given to any other companies or not, the Government will comply with all its contracts with the Union Pacific Railroad Company. Nearly they whole amount of bonds to which the Company will be entitled have already been delivered.

FIRST MORTGAGE BONDS: AT PAR.

By its charter, the Company is permit-ted to issue its own First Mortgage Bonds-to the same amount as the Government Bonds, and no more. These Bonds are a First Mortgage upon the entire road and all its equipments.

They have thirty years to run, at six per cent. and both (the '81's), will be due in 12 years, and they are worth, 112. If they had 30 years to run, they would stand at not less than 125. A perfectly safe First Mortgage Bond like the Union Pacific should approach this rate. The demand for European investment is already considerable, and on the completion of the work will doubtless carry the price to a large premium. price to a large premium.

SECURITY OF THE BONDS.

It needs no argument to show that a. First Mortgage of $26,500 per mile upon, what for a long time must be the only railroad connecting the Atlantic and Pacific States is perfectly secure. The entire amount of the mortgage will be about $30,000,000, and the interest $1,800,000, per annum in gold. The present curreney cost of this interest is less than $2,500,-000 per annum, while the gross carnings for the year 1868, from way business only, on an average of less than 700 miles of road in operation, were more than

NEW EMPIRE SEWING MACHINE. Lock Stitch.

LOCK STITCH.

RECEIVED the First Prize at the Great Fair of the American Institute, in New York, Oct. 26, 1867, and highest premium for beet manufacturing machine at Paris Exposition, July, 1867.

Why is it the best? It runs over seams alright; it will take fifty stitches to the inch—finer than any other machine will; it will sew heaving and thicker goods than any other machine; it uses any and every kind of thread; it sews starched goods as well as unstarched; it is sews the most delicate, thin, soft Fabric, without drawing. It sews a bias seam as well as any other.

The sufferer from these diseases should exercise the greatest faution in the selection of a remedy for his case, purchasing only that which he is assured from his investigations and inquiries, possesses true merit, is skilfully compounded, is free from injurious ingredients, and has established for itself a reputation for the cure of these diseases. In this connection we would submit those well-known remedies—

Hoofland's German Bitters Hoofland's German Tonic

Cone of the most cognent reasons ever given why a married man should get his life insured is that the money would prove a great help to his wife's second harsband, and might be the means of starting him in business.

"My dear," said a rural wife to her husband, on his return from town, "what was the sweetest thing you saw in bonnets in the city?"—'The ladies' faces my love.'

"Leave you, my friend, said a tipsy fellow, elinging to a lamp post on a dark night; "Leave you in a condition not to take care of yourself; (hic) never."

The young man who asked the daughter's hand and got the father's foot, had the consolation of knowing that his wooing was not bootless.

It is proposed to form a society in Boston for the prevention of cruelty to animals. This will not, it is understood, apply to henpocked husbands.

What's the difference between a hill and a pill? One's hard to get up and the oth.

It is a well established fact that fully one-half of the female portion of our population are seldom in the enjoyment of good health, or, to use their own expression, "never feel well." They are languid, devoid of all energy, extremely nervous, and have no appetite.

To this class of persons the Bitters, or the Tonic is sepecially recommended.

WEAK AND DELICATE CHILDREN Are made strong by the use of either of these remedies. They will cure every case of Maras-mus without fail.

TESTIMONIALS. Hon. Geo. W. Woodward,

Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Pa. writes:

"I find Hoofland's German Bitters is a good tonic, useful in the diseases of the digestive organs, and of great benefit in cases of debility, and want of nervous action in the system.

Yours, truly, GEO. W. WOODWARD."
